THE AMICABLE SOCIETY OF

LAZYBALLERINAS

We're proud that our crest symbolises key elements of our history as well as our purpose. The ballerina and the knight who feature on either side of the emblem each have a story to tell. The knight represents the longevity of our beautiful building dating back to the times of the Templar Knights. And, also linked to the building itself is the symbolism of a handshake found at the bottom of our crest which mirrors stunning architectural elements that feature throughout Temple Court. Not only does this mirror the stunning architectural elements that feature throughout Temple Court, but it also pays tribute to the original Amicable Society that was housed in this very building.

They played it safe and introduced life insurance in the UK... our society is a little more rebellious! The ballerina does not only reference our name, but also the namesake of the wine trellises used in the McLaren Vale wine region of South Australia - Lazy Ballerina. Each holding one of the two key serves from our delicious duo, cheese and wine, they, like you, are in for a good time.
